

On Apr 22, 2018, at 4:06 PM, Stan Shapiro <[REDACTED]> wrote:

Afternoon, Peter

I hate to be one of the endless hoards bothering you on Trust matters but this time I feel I must. It involves the recent PARC decision regarding charging Dragonfly Commons a $15,000 rezoning fee rather than accepting land, in this case lots of land, instead. I consider the original PARC decision, 5-4 by the way, [REDACTED], insensitive and incomprehensible and the inability to reverse that decision as administrative [REDACTED]

What I have heard just yesterday directly from Greg Dow, again the Chair of PARC, that the Trust somehow has the authority to make the final decision and could take action that would eliminate the need for Dragonfly to make any payment. I am not clear just how that works but if true I very much hope the Trust will do just that. I think the Dragonfly case speaks for itself and I will share you any lecture on the need for affordable housing as I am sure you are well aware of that fact. Hopefully,

Stan Shapiro